Widowers.

It is right and absolutely necessary for some widowers to marry again, and some of them act with propriety and consistency in such cases, but others make themselves rioiculous and even disgusting to all observers. To illustrate, after the first marriage, as the years pass by, a man becomes carcless in regard to personal cleanliness and other things, he slouches around, quits shaving his face or combing his hair, emotional woman needs to wear an and will not put on clean clothes on armor of control and repose, no mat-Sunday if he can help it; and if the good wife wants to go to church or to see some of their friends, he says her nature be suspected and it fashe has no clothes fit to wear and cinates; let it be discovered and it can't get any; he becomes prematurely old, and complains of rheumatism, back-acke and other ailtaste for company-especially young people. The wife dies. "Great Scotts!" What a marvelous change will soon come over that man. Sometimes in a few weeks or months Mo. he buys a new suit of clothes, hat and boots, and shirt as white a snow, hunts up the old razor and shaves, perhaps for the first time in fifteen years. Now he can be seen walking to church without a cane. In the church he does not look at the preacher, he can only see objects on the opposite side of the house. As apt as not he will try to go home with some young lady not yet out of her 'teens, and the fact is he will marry again just as soon as he can find a woman that will say yes, and he is not very particular in regard to her qualities, character, family relations or anything else; and this he will do regardless of what can be said or done by all of his friends or relations. He walks around now, whistling and singing as gay as I. J. C.

A Grateful Man.

GEXTS: I owe you an acknowledge-ment at least for your kindness in sending the medicine. I have used the syrup and pills and have procured more of our druggist, and how thankful I am for this great change in my feelings, and in my and in every portion of my body. sufferings were terrible and affected My from the crown of my head to the soles of my feet. For four months I was most of the time in bed; I could find no rest day nor night, appetite gone, food would not digest, terrible soreness across my stomach. But I feel like a new man and shall keep on using your remedies and am sure that I shall become entirely cured, although 1 have been a sufferer from rheumatism for thirty years. My faith is strong, and as I said before, I thank you, gentlemen, for your kindness. Others shall know of these results. With best wishes, I am ever yours, G. A. Manasmith, North Liberty, Johnson Co., Ia. Dec. 1, 1889.
